Russian president visits Morozov Children's Hospital

On June 1, Russian President Vladimir Putin visited the new building of the Morozov Children's Hospital together with deputy prime minister for social policies Tatyana Golikova, Health Care Minister Veronika Skvortsova and Moscow Mayor Sergey Sobyenin. Tashir Group was the general contractor for the construction project.

Russian President Vladimir Putin inspected the state-of-the-art medical center and talked to its little patients.

The new building of the Morozov Children's Hospital opened last October. In place of dilapidated buildings for infectious diseases, Tashir has built a new modern building hosting 15 departments, including Moscow's first center for bone marrow transplantation. The nine-story building of 71,000 square meters has wards for 500 patients. The building is unique in its functional and technological characteristics. In addition, the new building is connected with other hospital buildings by a skyway.

This is not the only construction project implemented by Tashir Group for the Moscow health care system. Since 2015, Tashir has been working on a new perinatal cardiology center, which will be the largest center of this kind in Europe. The new center for 450 patients will offer medical services to pregnant women, postpartum women and infants with cardiovascular conditions and help prevent such conditions in future children at the stage of family planning and in the early stages of pregnancy.

About the Morozov Children's Hospital

The new building includes an admissions unit with boxes for incoming patients on the first floor and one- and two-patient wards on Floors 2-7. All wards are equipped with alarm buttons and an enhanced monitoring system. The new building was designed to provide comfort for inpatient children. For example, in addition to special playing areas in each department, there will be a special central playing area on the 2nd floor with rooftop stained-glass lighting. Wards for children under 7 will allow the parents to stay with their children.

The new seven-story building will be joined to another existing building with a skyway. Also, the hospital will have two new entry points on 3rd Lyusinovsky Lane.

The building is divided into two sections, a therapy section and a surgery section. Each consists of a number of departments: endocrinology, pulmonology, neurosurgery, neurooncology, traumatology, orthopedics, etc. Each block of departments has designated rooms for treatment and diagnostics, as well as playing areas and classrooms. In addition to the central operating block with 12 operating rooms, there are special minor operating rooms in ward sections and an intensive care unit for 33 patients. The building also houses departments for functional diagnostics, endoscopy, physiotherapy, rehabilitation, radiography, and a laboratory processing 2 million tests a year. All these facilities are equipped with state-of-the-art medical equipment.

The Morozov Children's Hospital was founded in 1903 and is a multi-specialty hospital with 29 departments and the capacity of 1,100 inpatients. (including 39 IC patients and 5 one-day patients). The hospital has surgical, infectious diseases, neurosurgical, neurooncological, neonatological, traumatological, somatic, otorhinolaryngological, ophthalmological, pediatric, oncohematological, cardiorheumatological, endocrinological, neurological and gastroenterological departments. The hospital has 1,688 staff, including 461 doctors, with seven Professors, 18 Doctors of Medical Sciences, 65 Candidates of Medical Sciences and five doctors decorated with the Distinguished Doctor of the Russian Federation Award.
